

RIDERSHIP of Monterey Peninsula Transit buses has doubled in the last year. (John Perkins photo).

The non-hearing on buses

The bus company got all dressed up last week but found itself with nowhere to go.

The Monterey Peninsula Transit Co. scheduled a public meeting in Seaside City Hall Thursday morning, but Manager Thomas Albert found himself alone with one city councilman and The Seaside Post.

Councilman Oscar Lawson commented that the fact no one turned out for the meeting might be an indication that Monterey Peninsula Transit is doing a good job of providing service. Albert appeared both pleased and disappointed: pleased because no one came to complain, but disappointed because of the apparently apathy.

In any event, one could build some kind of case that the transit company has, in fact, done more to please rather than outrage the community. Albert told the Post that in the last year, patronage of buses on the Monterey Peninsula has doubled.

Albert said ridership has increased from some 24,000 persons a month at this time last year to about 48,000 a month this year.

"More service is available and we've revised all our schedules to improve reliability; we've slowed down the schedules to stay on time," Albert noted.

He said revenue has increased at the same time that bus fares are being reduced and costs of operating are increasing. The transit company is now offering a package of 44 rides for $10, which is the lowest package rate offered in recent years, Albert said.

Regular fares are 35 cents, and service is available throughout the Peninsula, with 43 bus stops in Seaside. At the last city council meeting, complaints about the location of two bus stops were directed to the transit company, and those stops are in the process of being moved.

"We've been spending funds to look for improvements," Albert said, "but this is not a profit-making enterprise."

The transit company now gets about $650,000 annually from the cities it serves from state tax revenues earmarked for county transit. These funds are filled into the coffers to help meet expenses, with fare revenues.

"We're buying new buses, increasing service, installing booths, and using all our money for that now," Albert said. "The improvements in Seaside haven't been really significant, but the reliability is better. We've added a route between Seaside and Fort Ord and Marina."

Albert said the latest county survey of transportation needs indicates that 20 times as many people on the Monterey Peninsula will be riding buses by 1995, and that need must be met. The Transit company has made an offer to the Salinas City Council to start regular bus service between the Peninsula and Salinas, but the council has made no moves in that direction.

Generally, Albert said, indications are that people on the Peninsula seem more willing than ever to leave the family car at home and to take the public transit system.

"There's more recognition of the problems of those without autos," Albert observed. "There's concern also about traffic congestion and tearing up virgin land here on the Peninsula for parking lots. A lot of people are realizing there are drawbacks to owning an auto. The problem has been that public transit hasn't been reliable enough for people not to have autos."

Planners turn thumbs down on television tower

Ocean View Cablevision, Inc. will have to look outside of Seaside for a location for its 120-foot receiving tower.

The Seaside Planning Commission voted last Wednesday to deny the firm's application for a use variance to construct the tower at 2100 Fremont Blvd., primarily for esthetic reasons.

Ray Waters, manager of Ocean View, told the planning commission that his firm wanted to build the tower to provide better service to local subscribers and for the generation of local programming.

The location of the tower in any other spot would be less desirable because the parcel of land that the firm has on Fremont is directly within the microwave signal path, Waters said.

"If we had to locate this on Del Monte," Waters said, "it would be 190 feet."

But some residents of the area expressed concern about both the visual dominance and potential safety hazards of locating such a tower in a predominately commercial area visible in a residential area. Commissioner Sam Brown asked Waters whether microwave towers of the sort proposed have been known to collapse, and Waters said he didn't know of any such accidents and added that the builder carries heavy liability insurance.

"I can't believe we would even consider building a tower like that at the entrance to our city," said Linda Lee Bassett, one of three commissioners who voted the request down. "I'm rather shocked, too."

Waters said Ocean View Cablevision is "close to going into all-channel service, and we will be in local origination (programming) April 15."

The conditions that were proposed for the project included the preparation of a total site development plan for the five parcels at the location on which Ocean View Cablevision has an option, with approval by the Board of Architectural Review.

Other proposed conditions would have required Ocean View to maintain the site in compliance with building, fire, and health and safety code standards and to underground all utilities.

Commissioner Berdine Houser wondered whether it might be possible to paint the tower some shade that would diminish its visual impact, but other commissioners didn't think even that would be adequate. The request was denied by the three votes of Linda Lee Bassett, James Clark, and Don Likas. Those voting against denial were commissioners Sam Brown and Berdine Houser.

Waters said after the meeting that the denial of the use variance request means Ocean View Cablevision will have to look somewhere outside of the city of Seaside for an alternate location for the tower.

In other business, the planning commission approved unanimously both the draft environmental impact report and use permit for construction of a multi-structure, 26-unit apartment building at 1500 Terrace by the applicant, Charles M. Kelly of Pacific Grove.

Charles Robinson of 1129 Elm in Seaside expressed concern that the construction of the building below his property would shut off his view of the bay, which was recently enhanced by his addition of a room facing in that direction.

Architect George E. Larsen said the project, as redesigned, would chop off about 5 feet, 4 inches from ground level of Robinson's property in one area, but that the other two buildings in the complex would have no significant impact.

The $330,000 project would encompass seven and one-half acres, and conditions attached to its approval will require undergrounding of all utilities and total landscaping of the project before occupancy of the building.

Planners also approved, with the lone dissenting vote by Commissioner Sam Brown, a request by Richard and Joey Storelli for the operation of a major auto repair and auto body shop at 1223-B Fremont Blvd. One of the conditions attached to that use permit is that no painting or primer spraying will be allowed except inside an approved paint booth, with the exception of small, spot painting work.

Commissioner Berdine Houser, who eventually voted in favor of the request, said he felt that an auto body shop was too heavy a use for that section of Fremont Boulevard.

The use permit was also granted on the condition that no parts, materials, or junk-surplus parts can be stored outside the building, and that mechanical work on the cars be confined to business hours of 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

In other business, the planning commission:

--Approved a use permit for a used car facility at 1613 Del Monte to John James.

--Approved Adeline Di Lorenzo's request for use permit for construction of a triplex in the R-2 district.

A new approach to dropout problem

A unique approach to solving the problem of the High School dropout was instituted last week in Seaside.

Under the direction of John Henry Rivers, Associate Dean of students at Monterey Peninsula College, three scholarships of $300 each will be awarded incoming freshmen in High School as an inducement to remain and complete High School.

The program is known as the Advance Commitment program, and students who are selected will earn $25 per quarter of successful completion of high school; the total amount of the $300 scholarship will be awarded upon registration in a post-secondary institution.

The following selection criteria will be used:

--Students must come from a low-income family (one with an annual income below $8,000 for a family of four).

--Students must have below-average academic performance.

--Students must demonstrate their ability to improve academic skills.

--An interest in attending college must also be demonstrated.

Rivers contacted the principals of Martin Luther King Junior High School and Seaside High School last week in order to begin the selection process. It's the culmination of several years of work, and Rivers hopes to see the program expanded to 20 students soon.

"The program provides the money and positive role models in the form of Big Brothers and Big Sisters to work with the students while they're still enrolled in high school," Rivers said.

As part of the program, students at Monterey Peninsula College who are interested in working with the scholarship recipients will tutor and counsel them, take them on trips to cultural and educational outlets, and act as positive role models providing incentives to stay in school. "These are students who would be potential dropouts," Rivers said.

Funds for the first three scholarships have been raised from local businesses and through the Human and Educational Development program at MPC.

"We had a goal of having $6,000 in funds to support 20 students, but we haven't been able to raise more funds. So we decided to start with the three students this year and hope to have 15 to 20 students next year."

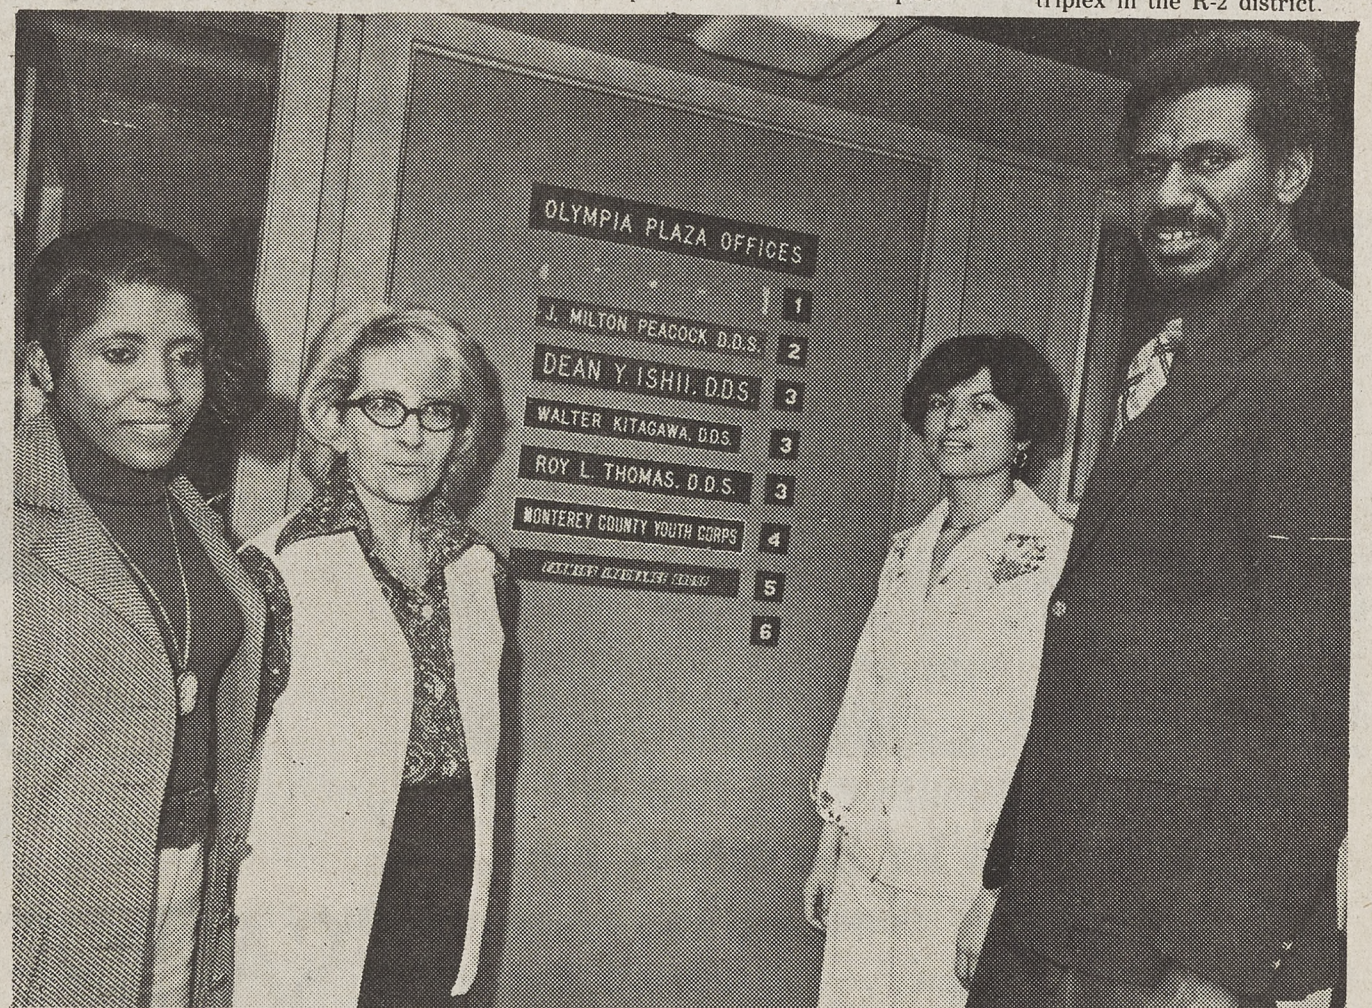

The selection committee for the scholarships is composed of the Associate Dean of Students (Rivers), the student director of HEDP, the student director of the campus tutorial center, an MPC financial aid officer, a faculty member, one peer counselor, a representative of the Black Students Union, and a representative of the community advisory committee.

Students who are awarded the scholarships may be disqualified from the program if they quit high school before graduation; if they're expelled from school and don't graduate; or if they do not participate in the "Big Brother" or "Big Sister" program.

Reinstatement can be provided with the concurrence of the selection committee after a hearing requested by the student before that body.

Rivers is enthusiastic about the program and believes it's the first time such an approach to the problem of the high school dropout has been attempted.

Youth Corps moves into new office

The Monterey County Youth Corps, the largest employer of youth on the Monterey Peninsula, held an Open House last Thursday to show off new offices in the Olympia Plaza.

The agency, which formerly went by the name of the Neighborhood Youth Corps, uses federal funds to provide job training experiences for young people, both in and out of school and during the summer.

The Youth Corps currently has some 1,200 enrollees on the Monterey Peninsula, and more funding for the program is expected soon through fiscal legislation awaiting President Gerald Ford's signature. The participants in the program must all meet standards of eligibility based on their income.

Those who are admitted to the program work on various jobs in the community at the rate of $2.10 per hour, which is paid by federal funds through the Comprehensive Employment Training Act. They receive the services of counselors who are employed by the Youth Corps to assist them with adjustments to their job and schedule.

The Monterey County Youth

Corps is administered through the Monterey County Office of Education under Director Al Belton. Its new office provides space for group and individual conferences as well as administrative quarters.

About 30 persons from the Community who have participated through their businesses attended the Open House Thursday.

Lawson may lose council seat

District Attorney William D. Curtis requested a dismissal of the Grand Jury indictment against Seaside City Councilman Oscar Lawson after Lawson had paid a fine of $1243.77 to the Court Clerk of the Monterey Court this past week.

According to law, if a candidate for public office fails to file his campaign financial disclosure statement within the specified period of time, he must pay the amount later claimed as a penalty. Lawson had filed a statement within the period, however his statement was alleged to be false. In a compromise agreement with the D.A.'s office, Lawson filed an amended statement listing more than twice the amount previously claimed. Since his amended statement was filed nearly one year late, he paid a fine of $1243.77, the amount he claimed he spent on his campaign.

In a related action, former Seaside Mayor Lou Haddad, in a letter to Seaside City Attorney Carey Royster, challenged Lawson's latest statement as being false and not all inclusive. Royster, under the ordinance adopted by the City of Seaside in December, 1973 is the Enforcing Authority, and is required by law to investigate any complaint brought to his attention. Haddad stated that he had reason to believe that Lawson had again falsified his statement, and that he (Lawson) had knowledge of some receipts and expenditures which he did not list.

In an interview with the Post News-Sentinel, Haddad said that he questioned the veracity of a $500 "loan" made by James "Pat" Patterson, stating that he didn't believe that Mr. Patterson actually made that loan.

The Seaside City Ordinance, which prohibits expenditures of over $1250 connected with any one city campaign, provides that if a candidate who is subsequently elected to office spends more than that amount, his seat shall be vacated.

Monterey Marlins earn funds for swim events

Members of the Monterey Marlins Aquatic Association earned $5,000 in pledges at their recent "Swimathon."

As each young swimmer attempted to complete the goal of 200 laps around the pool spectators urged the youngsters on by pledging varying amounts of money for each lap completed. A penny a lap was a common pledge. Nearly 90 swimmers participated.

Most of the money collected goes to the Marlins international travel fund to help defray travel costs to swim meets. A donation of 25 percent will go to the Swimmers Hall of Fame.

The Marlins are sanctioned as a competitive swim team by the Amateur Athletic Union (AAU). Its members, ages five to 18, come from civilian and military families in communities surrounding Monterey Bay.

Youngsters whose families represent the Army Combat Developments Experimentation Command (CDEC) are Dawna, John, and Heather Wandke; Dana and Brett Fisher; Jama and Leah Hughes; Bill and Ann Mulvihill; Karen, Terri, and Mary Leigh Lindquist; Michelle and Jill LaGrandeur; Sam Seto; Brooks and Catherine Croonquist; William, Ken and Lisa Gavlick; and Mike Kracht.

The group is jointly sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District and Fort Ord Youth Activities. Head coach is Harry DeVictoria of Seaside. Bill Schramm, of the Naval Post Graduate School is president of the governing board.

Adelphian Concert Choir to perform at St. Francis Xavier

The Adelphian Concert Choir from the University of Puget Sound in Tacoma, Wash., will perform at St. Francis Xavier Church at 8 P.M. on Friday, March 21, in Seaside. The concert is sponsored by St. Francis Xavier Parish.

In 43 years of touring—four times in recent years to Europe—the Adelphians have developed a reputation for excellence. In England in 1970, their mastery of music prompted one observer to comment: "They have achieved as near to perfection as I have ever heard."

A man of unusual ability and dedication is the impetus behind a choir which garners such praise. As director of the Adelphians, Bruce Rodgers demands unswerving devotion and hard work from the choir which has developed worldwide acclaim.

Rodgers, also director of the UPS School of Music, will soon complete his 23rd year in that capacity and as conductor of the choir which will present more than 20 concerts in the western United States during its current tour.

A privately endowed university, UPS has an enrollment of nearly 3,000 full-time students. The School of Music, with 12 full-time professors on its faculty, is one of five professional schools on the campus.

A man who displays pride in the Adelphians, Rodgers takes a personal interest in the individual activities of his choir members, cultivating a loyalty that remains intact throughout the years.

Through extensive planning, research and organization, Rodgers weaves together a program which reflects the musical base of his career and taps the potential of the 42 vocalists who comprise the choir.

A fine baritone, Rogers has specialized in voice. He holds bachelor's and master's degrees in voice, conducting and theory from Eastman School of Music at the University of Rochester in New York, and a doctor of philosophy degree in musicology from the University of California at Los Angeles.

An authority on madrigal singing, the musicologist has marketed a series of his choral arrangements through one of America's largest publishing houses. At the university 23 years ago, Rodgers organized the University Madrigal Singers, whose members are a select group of Adelphians, and the Tacoma Choral Society.

It was in Simcoe, near Toronto, Ontario (Canada), that Rodgers began his music education. After winning a high school solo singing competition in St. Louis, Mo., he received a four-year scholarship to Eastman where he was an honor student, participating in oratorios and operas while there.

He also was a soloist in the Eastman oratorio series aired on CBS radio and in two churches, and served as organist and choirmaster of another church. Besides serving metropolitan parishes as choir director, Rodgers conducted choirs of all faiths while in the Navy from 1943 to 1945.

Author of "Manual for Self-Help in Aural Harmony," Rodgers was assistant professor of music and director of theory and glee clubs at the University of Wyoming before coming to UPS.

Emergency course planned

The California Division of Forestry (CDF) and Monterey Peninsula College are cooperating in presenting an emergency vehicle operating course for Peninsula fire service agencies. The course will be conducted at the East Garrison of Fort Ord on March 18, 19, 20, and 21 with the cooperation of the Army.

The course will be supervised by Glenn L. Horwege, a professional defensive driving program consultant. Participants will operate line-ready fire apparatus that they normally drive, during the training. Vehicles will be operated under emergency conditions and participants will be exposed to actual driving hazards.

It is designed to provide emergency vehicle operators with practical knowledge of vehicle limitations, roadway and traffic hazards, recognition of accident traps, reflex action, decision making and recovery from emergency situations.

Participating are: CDF, Castroville, Marina, Carmel-by-the-Sea, Carmel Valley and Salinas Fire Departments.

Classroom work will be conducted at CDF Regional headquarters on Garden Road in Monterey.

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor:

In the last election, we had the choice between two middle-of-the-road gubernatorial candidates who had no basic difference in philosophies. The other races were much the same.

I feel that "None of the Above" should be placed on the ballot under each office so that voters can have a chance to express their dislike for the candidates on the ballot.

PAUL GRUNERT

Dear Editor:

All too often considerate, helpful actions are only known to the recipient. Since Seaside benefited from such an action, I think it should be known.

Seaside has an art commission. It arranges monthly exhibits of art and crafts in the City Hall and sponsors a yearly art contest for residents. It also sponsors six free demonstrations of art, or crafts, in the council chambers each year.

On Friday, March 7, a craft demonstration was scheduled at 7:30 p.m. At 6 p.m. the craftsman called Walter Avery, a Seaside Art Commissioner, at the Fort Ord Craft Complex to say he could not demonstrate. Avery was teaching a painting class, so he couldn't be the replacement. With the help of the Craft Complex director, Mr. Puckett, and the assistant director, Mrs. Bibber, the demonstration wasn't cancelled.

Two young instructors at the Craft Complex, Tony Marsh and Joe Carter, were at our City Hall before 7:30 p.m. They brought all the necessary equipment, including a potter's wheel. Their pottery demonstration was excellent. I've never heard so many questions asked, or better answered. It was one of the most interesting demonstrations ever held at the City Hall.

Seaside gets more than its share of slurs, but it does have many citizens who are proud of their city. As one of them, I would like to publicly thank Tony Marsh, Joe Carter, Walter Avery, Richard Puckett, and Mrs. Claudia Bibber for giving Seaside a "boost."

Monterey Rugby Tournament this weekend

Saturday and Sunday, March 22 and 23, a total of 32 top rated Rugby football teams from across the United States will descend upon the Monterey Peninsula to take part in the 17th Annual Monterey National Rugby Tournament.

Beginning in 1959 with just seven teams, this tournament has grown throughout the years to the event of today with 32 teams playing an exhausting schedule of 72 games over the two-day tournament. Four games will be played simultaneously on "pitches" or playing fields laid out on the Collins Polo Field at Pebble Beach.

Again, the field will be provided through the courtesy of Del Monte Properties, Inc., owner of Seventeen-Mile Drive and the Del Monte Forest. The tournament is co-sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Northern California Rugby Football Union, the sanctioning body. Proceeds will go to the civic activities of the Monterey Peninsula Jaycees and for the operational expenses of the Northern California Rugby Football Union.

Rugby is the nation's fastest growing sports among the college-age crowd. In this age of mechanical professional and amateur sport, Rugby remains ruggedly amateur and vigorously robust. In near non-stop halves of up to 40 minutes, 30 men go at it in continuous, grueling play.

Armed with little more than shorts, jerseys, cleated shoes, determination, teamwork and wits, two teams of ruggers battle for points. Rugby is an honest, delightfully informal and free-spirited sport played with gusto and abandon.

Unlike the bleacher-bound quality of a football game,

Monterey's Rugby tournament exudes a unique picnic-festival like aura where everybody finds the easy camaraderie of the players highly contagious. It is this informal quality of Rugby when combined with the natural beauty of the Monterey Peninsula's Pebble Beach Polo Field which creates the unbeatable zest of Rugby at the Monterey National Rugby Tournament. Whether a part day or the entire weekend with the ruggers, the tournament is a fabulous way to spend a Monterey Peninsula weekend.

Play starts at 8:30 a.m. each day and lasts until 4 p.m., or end of play. Tickets are on sale at $3 per day or $5 for the weekend. Tickets may be purchased at the gate entrances to the Del Monte Forest, Seventeen Mile Drive. Follow the signs to the Collins Polo Field, Pebble Beach.

THE MONTEREY National Rugby Tournament, sponsored by The Monterey Peninsula Jaycees, will be held at Collins Field, Pebble Beach, March 22-23, beginning at 8 a.m. There will be 32 teams participating in these all day events. Tickets are on sale now, and all proceeds will go to community development and youth activities. Donation is $3. Shown above are two of the teams that participated in last year's Rugby Play-Offs. The affair is sponsored by the Monterey Rugby Team comprised of members from Fort Ord, Marina, Seaside, Pacific Grove, Salinas, Carmel and the Defense Language Institute.

Red Cross to conduct membership campaign

As one of the nation's largest voluntary organizations, the Red Cross is dependent primarily on the individual contributions of the American people. The American National Red Cross and its chapters are financed as one Red Cross, with the objective of providing interrelated services, programs, and activities to all Americans.

On the Monterey Peninsula, the Carmel Chapter and the Monterey County Chapter will be conducting a membership and fund campaign through the mail. The fund drive chairmen of the areas, Willard Fonda in Monterey, Don Butts in Seaside and Marina, Morton Balch in Pacific Grove, and Mrs. LeLand Cagwin in Carmel have asked local businessmen and other volunteers for help in their communities with the solicitations.

The Red Cross places high value on the individual support and involvement of the American people. The regular membership contribution is $1 and Butts feels that if everyone on the peninsula gave this amount that the combined goal of the chapters, which is $109,000 could be reached easily.

Both chapters contribute towards the support of the blood programs at Community Hospital and to the Bloodmobiles which come to different areas of the Peninsula from the Central California Blood Bank. Both chapters participate in water safety and first aid training programs, and meet the emergency needs of disaster victims and give help to military families.

Disasters or other national emergencies in which the Red Cross serves in fulfillment of its congressional charter obligations require additional fund raising efforts, Mrs. Cagwin explained. Carmel must raise enough funds in order to support its three ambulances in Carmel, Carmel Valley and Big Sur, supply the production volunteers with supplies, and maintain the station wagon used for transportation of the elderly and veterans. Monterey maintains a van for the handicapped swim program, provides baby sitter training for junior high youths, and teaching skills for the home care of the sick and injured. The Red Cross is the Peninsula's emergency-oriented organization, as it is able to teach prevention of avoidable emergencies, prepare people to deal with avoidable and unavoidable emergencies, and helps individuals, families, and the community to cope with crisis.

The 1975 Domestic Travel Program of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority is in progress. Thirty-six travel grants will be awarded to high school junior and senior women throughout the United States who are the winners of an essay contest.

Applicants must write a 1,000 word essay on the subject "Reading: A Right - A Responsibility." Four winners and four alternates will be chosen from each of the nine regions of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority. This program is one among many of the sorority's efforts toward continued dedication to improving human lives through service to others. The domestic travel grant program began in 1969 with 36 young ladies and continues to be offered by the sorority in alternate years.

The program provides an opportunity for gifted high school young women to gain first-hand knowledge of places of historical interest in the United States. Eleventh and 12 grade students are able to tour the Eastern United States and

LAW IN ACTION

UNDUE INFLUENCE

If you can't trust your own children, whom can you trust? Alas, not many. At least when it comes to divvying up your estate.

Edgar, for example, died, leaving five children. His will gave equal shares of the family estate to three of the children—but only $100 cash to Ella and Wilbur. Ella and Wilbur promptly challenged the will, claiming undue influence.

It seems Edgar had been hospitalized with a stroke. The three favored children—all adults—visited Daddy with a will already drawn up. They took along a priest and a doctor as witnesses. Edgar was too ill, so did not sign the will.

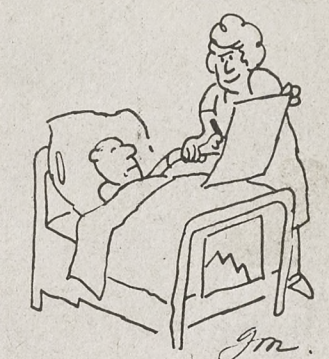

Several weeks passed. Again the three children tried to get Edgar's signature. This time the three persuaded their father to sign. Later, Edgar left the hospital and went to live with one of the children. The three brothers and sisters kept Ella and Wilbur from visiting their father. Later, he died. As a result of the contest, the court set the will aside. California law presumes undue influence when the person who benefits holds a position of trust, and has an active role in preparing or signing the will. The three beneficiaries here had abused their position of trust. In court, they could not overcome that presumption.

The same presumption would apply if a lawyer who writes a will for a client gets any or an unusual portion of the estate. Anyone dealing with a parent, friend, husband or wife, brother or sister, or close relative has a "confidential relationship"—a fiduciary position. That person cannot deal at arms length; he must be extra careful not to abuse his position, or take advantage of the one who trusts him. Otherwise the deal will be presumed to be under undue influence.

A nurse or housekeeper who gets old Mrs. Peavy to make out a will and ends up with the estate, is suspect. He or she may have to prove there wasn't hanky-panky.

Undue influence isn't the only ground for setting aside a will. The maker must be of "sound mind" when he signed. The will-maker who does not know the nature of the document, or what he owns, or who his relatives and friends are, would lack capacity to make a will and it could be set aside by the court.

Lecture series available on Drake ship

First-hand account will be given by crew members of the Golden Hinde II in a special lecture series being sponsored by Eureka Federal Savings & Loan Association in Seaside.

The Golden Hinde II, which arrives in San Francisco mid-March after a five-month voyage from Plymouth, England, is a full scale replica of Sir Francis Drake's legendary ship which landed near San Francisco during its circumnavigation of the world, 1577-1579.

Three years of research and two years of painstaking construction were required to reproduce Drake's mid-16th Century warship in England and to fit her with handsewn flaxen sails, and hand-twisted hemp ropes, and to cast, mold and carve 18 cannon, Tudor furniture, and typical Elizabethan armor, small arms and other furnishings and trappings.

The voyage of the Golden Hinde II retracing a portion of Drake's route across the Atlantic and up the Pacific Coast is an heroic passage for the Captain and its 15-man crew, just as dangerous as the original sailing.

The Golden Hinde II will be berthed at San Francisco's Fisherman's Wharf, Pier 41 South, and will open for public boarding and inspection Easter week, March 22.

Clubs and organizations wishing to arrange a lecture program by one of the crew, illustrated by slides or a 28-minute film, should contact Eureka Federal Savings, 1658 Fremont Blvd., Seaside; telephone 899-4161.

"As members of the crew will be in the San Francisco Bay Area only through April, lecture engagements will be accepted on a first come, first serve basis," said Sosik.

Further information may be had by contacting EFS and organizations should specify preference of slides or the film.

The special Golden Hinde II Adventure lectures are being sponsored by Eureka Federal Savings, and are offered without charge as part of EFS' year-round community service programs.
